TAIPEI (NORTH)

Taipei is the heartbeat of the country - the first port of call for most visitors, this bustling capital region teems with life in the frenetic pace of its cities. And what foods in turn, are the many night market stalls, restaurants, cafes and dining joints around the city - some open till the wee hours!

Tactful and for a well-rounded itinerary, you can explore some of the city's other attractions.

HUALIEN (EAST)

The picturesque seaside location of Hualien makes it a popular getaway for city-dwellers who want to relax in the beach, the foil to their frenzied urban lives. Hualien's crystal clear waters are safe for swimming and diving enthusiasts, and the pristine beaches are perfect for a leisurely stroll.

MAOKONG GONDOLA

Visit this 830m-long gondola that takes you from the gondola station to the top of the mountain, making the ride takes 13 minutes. Enjoy the view from this gondola as you glide above the clouds. The view from the gondola is a feast for the eyes, with the lush greenery of the forest and the vibrant city below.

CAPE JADE

Established by an ex-publishing editor, Vang Tai, Cape Jade serves as an underground cultural center. It showcases live music, arts and craft exhibitions. Visitors are welcomed by the soothing sounds of acoustic guitar. The ambiance and atmosphere of the place make it perfect for a romantic date.

MAOKONG GONDOLA

Guests can enjoy a bamboo-weaved experience while riding the gondola. The bamboo baskets are handcrafted by local artisans, adding a touch of cultural authenticity to the ride.

ELEISE BOOKSTORE

One of the largest retail bookstores in Taipei, it also has a large collection of English-language publications and translated materials. The bookstore also set up its first 24-hour bookstore in Taipei at the Pavillion outlet, which operates 24 hours a day.

KAOHSIUNG (SOUTH)

The second largest Taiwanese city, Kaohsiung in the southern gateway to the country, known as Taiwan’s Maritime Capital. Its city is set in one of the largest estuaries in the world.

LOVE MOTELS

CANG JIA.

This is probably the best place to try one of the many elexic love motels that have put Kaohsiung on the map. These aren't associated with the gesture you're thinking of, these classic joints provide a room for fun, and some rooms come with themes that include various costumes and waterfalls. It's all about decor and epic loneliness. They’re perfect for short stays (from 3 hours to half day) and prices are calculated by the hour.

FENGJIA NIGHT MARKET

To visit Kaohsiung is incomplete without dropping by the bustling Fengjia Night Market, which is reputedly the biggest in the country. To avoid weekends when the crowds can be formidable. Frequent by a large student clientele, prices here are very competitive. If you make it here try their seafood dishes like cuttlefish and eggplant. The stalls here offer a selection of food, from simple street food to more exotic dishes accompanied by 3 choices of sauces, and your100,000 yen is all spent by doing something interesting in hawker food stalls.

CICHTINGTAN BAY

Take a stroll down the beach or cycle along the long and extensive cycling trail that winds around the bay as you look at the glori- ous natural view. You can also enjoy the view of the mountains with a panoramic view from the beach.

DREAM WZZA

Sleep under the stars and feel like you're in the heart of the night sky. The wooden huts have a roof for when it rains, and the blankets have a touch of elegance. The hours can be spent lounging on the hammock, taking in the view of the mountains, and enjoying the serenity of nature.

TAICHUNG (WEST)

Located in the west coast of Taiwan, it's a popular access point to the mountainous ridge of the country for those who like. For others, the city offers a hedonistic mix of night markets, restaurants, museums and all you need.

GUTTING FROM TAIPEI - TRAIN - 3 HRS

MUSEUM HOPPING

The sprawling National Museum of Taiwan's displays which in 7 museums roll into one features an 800 year history in this 2 hour hands-on exhibition. Just push the buttons and watch what happens. The museum has a lot of exhibits and hands-on activities, although most folks are content to just enjoy walking along the pathway - a barrier of greenery that connects the 2 museums.

KAOUHSIUNG (SOUTH)

Love is probably the best place to try one of the many elexic love motels that have put Kaohsiung on the map. These aren't associated with the gesture you're thinking of, these classic joints provide a room for fun, and some rooms come with themes that include various costumes and waterfalls. It's all about decor and epic loneliness. They’re perfect for short stays (from 3 hours to half day) and prices are calculated by the hour.
Travelling can be wildly addictive, there is no doubt to that - it is the free rein to decide how and where you spend your days. It is living a life, unshackled. It is the one opportunity to embody free-spiritedness. So when your holiday draws near and it’s time to revert to the banality of everyday life, the aftermath can be a little daunting.

So instead of choosing to nurse your daily grind wounds with just one annual vacation - why not embrace travelling as part of your lifestyle? And to help you make that transition, we have interviewed travelling sage and co-founder of Lonely Planet, Tony Wheeler.

To begin with, travelling for work and planning for a holiday are on opposite ends of the spectrum, says Tony, saying that “travelling for a living is certainly no 9 to 5 job. You never know what’s going to happen and to be a good traveller - you have to learn to be adaptable and flexible to change.” He adds, “There’s no knocking off and pouching of time cards whenever you please. Travelling as a career is a whole different ball game!”

For your travelling career to flourish, two things are vital: “Be passionate and have travelling ingrained in your lifestyle.” Passion is especially important because while travelling you will experience diverse cultures, you will taste the most unusual food and you will be put in situations that will push you out of your comfort zone. Everything will be very foreign to you. “Your passion will be the sustenance that pushes you to move past any obstacles.”

Enriching your wanderlust is easy too, if you take the time to understand the history, the language and the geography of the country you are about to visit. Because learning about the country allows you to shed the “tourist” stigma and to assimilate better with the locals.

Travelling does reward everyone with experience and knowledge but it has its drawbacks too. Being hasty and impulsive are two major obstacles. “Most often trips without a plan is setting yourself up for failure. But even with the most thought out plan, you must remember that foreign lands are synchronous with unpredictability!” To prevent yourself from getting into such tricky situations, Tony’s advice to aspiring travellers is to always stay alert and travel cautiously.

For Tony, living a life of travel requires a whole lot of commitment but for Tony, he loves to travel. “Because of my passion, I’ve been to some of the most peculiar places. I’ve trekked through the jungle of Madagascar’s “Betty Bamban” in Boisville, Papua New Guinea. I’ve climbed the Nyiragongo Volcano in Congo DRC. I’ve even walked across the Mideast River in the Niger Desert in Tunisia.”

So do you feel inspired yet? Travel like Tony Wheeler by coupling that innate desire with his tips, and you might be on your way to travelling for a living.

CULTURE DENOMINATOR

BIRTHDAY BRUISES

Cast cement cakes aside and opt across to Germany, where single men serve bubbles (thrown by their friends) on the chairs of city hall. Many believe that the activity is symbolic - for clearing up single 30-year-old men who are able to look after a household. Moreover, a little back bend isn’t half as exciting as a birthday party in Quebec or England. In Quebec, birthday kids receive a punch for each year (with a bonus one thrown in for good luck), while in parts of England, children are lifted by their limbs and then dunked on the ground by their parents once for each year they’ve lived on.

NEW YEAR NOSTALGIA

With New Year only half a year away, it might be fun to think about spending it almost in Mexico, where locals wear colourful underwear to symbolise happiness, while in Bolivia, people can yellow underwear as a symbol of striking. In Denmark, you can join the locals as they jump off chairs, clash drums, and throw plates at their neighbours doors to symbolise friendship. In Scotland, the Hogmanay celebration runs for 3 days; after midnight, neighbours exchange food and drink door to door.

WEDDING WISDOM

Stir clear of British weddings if you suffer from symptoms of aromatophobia, in England, finding a spider inside a wedding dress is actually considered auspicious. While crying at a wedding is normal, the Tuva minority in China takes it one step farther - the bride-to-be is supposed to sing a sad song and cry for days leading to her wedding date. On a happier note, in Brunei, strangers are welcome to join in wedding celebrations, even if they don’t know a single attendee.

FANTASY FUNERAL

Dying may look trivial on your current agenda, but it’s never too early to start planning for your funeral. You can draw inspiration from funerals in Brittany, where a little fly is known to appear on the lips of the corpse before flying off to a jar of honey to take its fill. Many believe that the fly is more than the soul of the departed; for a more personal and afterlife experience, you could even consider having a (overpriced!) fantasy-themed coffin from Ghana. The coffin is meant to provide the deceased soul with something it can eternally enjoy, and it is not uncommon for loved ones paying tribute to cell phones or Coca-Cola bottles.
With just a few days to explore a city teeming with tourist hotspots, it’s easy to lose focus as you struggle against the clock. But don’t give in to disssusion: you can scour the streets of New York City (quite thoroughly) in just a couple of days if you plan your trip well.

TIMES SQUARE
Times Square lends you the opportunity to experience bustling, bustling New York firsthand. Neon lights, window shopping and ambient noise all add to the experience. While you’re in the area, walk across and pick up tickets to an evening Broadway show - they sell out fast.

CENTRAL PARK
If enormous skyscrapers and bright lights start to lose appeal, Central Park is less than a mile away from Times Square. Grab your running shoes for a jog around the beautiful gardens or choose a comfortable spot for a mini picnic with friends as you take in the dappled sunshine and enjoy the 19th century park designs.

ROCKEFELLER CENTER
If you’re going to New York between winter and early spring, you have to see the outdoor ice skating rink just outside the iconic Rockefeller Center Ice Rink. Rent ice skates or just watch the skaters as they zip past the bronze-gilded statue of Prometheus with the regal 30 Rock building towering behind.

GROUND ZERO (WORLD TRADE CENTER)
The National 9/11 Memorial has twin reflecting pools built on the site where the twin towers stood previously. Head to the Visitor Center with its Memorial Exhibition and take a moment to write a note in the guest book at the end of the tour.

BROADWAY THEATRE
Finish off with a Broadway musical in the heart of New York City. A unique cocktail of smells and ambient decor, Broadway’s vibe just can’t be recreated in Singapore’s Esplanade yet Dig in to a buffet of musicals that air perennially, like ‘Booth of Mormon’, ‘Jersey Boys’ and ‘Mary Poppins’.

INTREPID SEA, AIR AND SPACE MUSEUM
Check out the various US fighter jets used during WWII and the Vietnam War. Get up close to the world’s fastest airplane the Concorde, explore a submarine and get on board the Intrepid aircraft carrier with its various decks showcasing spy planes, bomber jets and much more.

STATURE OF LIBERTY & BROOKLYN BRIDGE
From the World Trade Center, head to the ferry terminal, where a 24-hour ferry service will take you to Staten Island. You can snap up some good shots of the statue and Brooklyn Bridge, one of the world’s longest suspension bridges, along the way.

THE PRIMER OF MUAY THAI

The city of Bangkok is best known for its streetside hawkers, dive bars and smiles. If you were to ask a traveller to sum up Bangkok in a word, you’ll probably get bustling. But beneath that organized chaos is a nation enamoured with their national obsession - Muay Thai.

For the average Thai, their national sport is more than just athleticism - it’s part of their cultural DNA. Boys as young as nine from all over Thailand pick up the sport because it is synonymous with their rite of passage. The ones that do start younger usually belong to a lineage of successful Thai boxers, so they are often in it to champion the Muay Thai legacy.

A fixture at any big occasion in Thailand, from the King’s and Queen’s Birthday to the Songkran festival Thailand’s New Year, this art form always have the spotlight.

So what does it take become a Muay Thai plaider? Join a well-equipped gym Thailand is home to many of these excellent gyms. One of them being the Korawarnai gym, situated just two hours from Thailand’s international airport. Their training sessions have helped not only build champions, they’ve transformed many young boys into lean, mean fighting machines.

A day in Korawarnai begins at the break of dawn for everyone - boxers start off with a mile-long jog. After which, it is a series of exercises that are suited to their age. Boys below the age of 13 train with adrenaline exercises or it helps to build physical vitality, for others weight-building is often the core of their training programs because for a boxer to compete nationally, he has to weigh at least 100 pounds.

The last call for many Thai boxers in usually between the ages of 16 to 20. Most of them choose to retire that early because they have been fighting for more than ten years, especially for professional. Many Thai fighters nearing 20 years of age choose to retire - it would mean a change in identity, or ‘non-Thai’ and such a drastic change is simply too much for many boxers. It also means that these fighters have been through quite a lot of injury and stress so instead of exerting themselves further, they move on to helping younger fighters.

Many Thai is also known for raising many eyebrows - particularly foreign ones. To the outsider eye, Muay Thai is often seen as barbaric and brutal, and to have young boys engineered in that manner is often passed off as ‘cruel’. But no matter how the world slices it to a fellow Thai, maintaining this traditional martial art is synonymous with pride and glory.

#19 How to Travel for a Living

By Asha Gizelle M.

A MUST-READ FOR THE SINGLETON GIRL ON THE ROAD

How many times have some of your best laid plans been foiled by a friend’s coercive discussion? For a female traveller, it’s easy to fall prey to scepticism after hearing about a “big bad world” brimming with dangers. All the same, if any of you harbour dreams of exploring everything under the sun, moon and stars, remember that time and tide wait for no man, or woman. So quit being a damsel in distress and hit the road. Keep these basic tips in mind and you’ll soon be self-sufficient enough to handle almost anything life throws at you along the way...

BE YOUR OWN DOCTOR

Carry a mini-pharmacy at all times. Stock up on painkillers, diarrhoea medication, antacids, calamine lotions and band-aids. Don’t forget sunscreen and moisturisers, as well as some hand sanitiser. After long hours spent mucking about a dirt road (or beach), the last thing you need is a touch of food poisoning!

HOLD THE FORT

When you leave your lodging or hotel room, it is best to hang a “Do Not Disturb” sign on your door. It might look contrary to you but won’t hurt if patrons with ill-intentions get a little apprehensive once they see this. If you want to be overly cautious, leave the lights and television on (even if environmental concerns grow at your conscience). If others think there’s some sort of parity in your room, they may have second thoughts about intruding.

PLAY DETAILS’ ADVOCATE

Never be lulled into complacency when you are travelling on your own. Remember to leave hard copies and/or emails behind for your friends and family with details about your itinerary, location and contact numbers. Also leave behind copies of your passport together with your traveller’s insurance. As another safety precaution, request for your room number to be hand-written instead of spoken out loud. Walls have ears, and you need to ensure that nobody else knows where you’re staying.

BACK SOME COMMON SENSE

Be vigilant all the time. Keep your wits about you even when you choose to let your hair down. Dodge alcoholic drinks if you must. If looking up is on your agenda, make sure you dress a bit to tell your friend about it, or go public so that the hotel staff can catch a glimpse of you both. Sometimes caution may resemble paranoia, but - as clichéd as it may sound - being safe trumps feeling sorry.

1. BE A TRAVEL JOURNALIST

Ever Wondered how you could travel long-term and not run out of money? The answer: travel writing. Looking to make some extra money with your writing? Here are some jobs you may want to consider:

2. BE A FLIGHT ATTENDANT

Skyline of Yokohama

3. BE A GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL

When you work for a government organisation, you’ll get the opportunity to meet plenty of officials and dignitaries. You might even get a good dosage of first-class treatment while carrying out your official duties. The thing is, travelling on government business often has a hall-and-cause protocol attached to it, as you are representing an entire country. So if you’re looking for some time to unwind, your days will be short and limited.

4. VOLUNTEER WITH AN NGO

Join an NGO you’re passionate about - like WWF, UNICEF or Doctors Without Borders - and you might be sent to far-flung places to promote your cause! You can travel while doing good deeds - the only problem is not knowing where you’ll be next...

5. BE A TRAVEL AGENT

As a travel agent, you might be sent all over the globe to gather information on the best places to visit and the best tours to follow. The flaw in that great system is the lack of independence - after all, it’s not your own holiday you’re going to you’re just doing research.

6. BE A CONTESTANT

If all you wanted to do was travel for the experience and beat about it to all your friends on Facebook or blog, you can join a travel contest - like our “WIN A TRIP TO YOKOHAMA CONTEST”!

You’ll get return flights on Singapore Airlines, 3-star accommodation, and visits to some attractions. It’s the best way for you (and a friend) to blog, Facebook and tweet about your travel experience, even if it’s just for 4 days. Check the back page or visit www.campus.com.sg/yokohama for more!
Q: WHAT WAS YOUR MOST MEMORABLE TRAVEL EXPERIENCE?

WANT TO EXPLORE A BLOG ON ALL SORTS OF INDULGENCES IN LIFE AND LIVING AT THE PALEST, NO REGRETS, FOR ME ONLY LOVE ONCE.

Earlier this year, my girlfriend and I travelled to France to celebrate her birthday. We spent a week in Paris, and it was truly a wonderful experience. We visited all the famous landmarks, tried some delicious French cuisine, and even took a short trip to the beautiful countryside.

We stayed in a cozy apartment near the Eiffel Tower, and we spent most of our days walking around and taking in the sights. We also went on a boat tour of the Seine River, which was a unique and fun way to see the city from a different perspective.

The highlight of our trip was visiting the Louvre Museum. We spent hours exploring the museum, admiring the art and history. We also got to see the Mona Lisa up close, which was a dream come true.

Overall, our trip to France was an incredible experience. We created so many memories and had a lot of fun. We hope to visit again someday!

HERE’S WHAT OUR STUDENTS SAY

Looking back, my time at UQ has definitely helped kick start my career by giving me hands-on experiences on real projects, working alongside established scientists in some of Australia’s top facilities – something that’s led directly to my current role as a research assistant at the Institute for Biodiversity and Health. I’ve learned so much from my time at UQ and I’m excited to see what the future holds for me.

MICHAEL SONG, Master in Biodiversity from UQ Research Assistant, National Collaborative Research Infrastructure Strategy Bio-Imaging Facility, Australian Institute for Bioengineering and Nanotechnology

Make the UQ Advantage your advantage.

The best start to your science career with everything you would expect from a university in the top 1% of the world – a wide choice of programs, world class facilities and great teachers.

Plus there’s even more with the UQ Science Advantage:

THE LIST
Ten Weirdest International Laws

SANDCASTLES PROHIBITED
Ercolino, Italy
In this coastal town, sandcastles are prohibited because they “obstruct the passage” of people on beaches. Offenders are fined €500, compelling architects might want to consider getting back to the drawing board.

PRANK CALL FINES
Louisiana, USA
Don’t be surprised if your next prank call gets you with heavy monetary repercussions in the state of Louisiana. People who instruct phones to deliver calls to nonexistent persons without their consent can be hit with a $500 fine.

LOOSE CHANGE NOT ACCEPTED
Louisiana, USA
Penny wise pound foolish? Don’t bother holding on to loose change in Canada, where shopkeepers have the right to refuse payment in pennies (less than 20 cents). For any transaction exceeding 20 cents.

US ANY LOO
Scotland
Taking hospitality to new heights, Scotland has a law forcing people to let strangers into their homes if they need to visit the restroom. Incidentally, Scotland’s police records show that 90% of crimes were committed during the year.

NO TO GOING COMMANDO
Thailand
Adhere to the dress code at all times in Thailand, where you can be charged for leaving your head without wearing something. In principle, this law intends to improve personal hygiene and looks great on the books. Reliable enforcement may be seen a little far-fetched, but we know you.

PILOT FIGHT
Germany
Taking the idles you choose, you look far too literally, the German government classifies pillows as passive weapons. Even if your intentions are nothing but honest presentation of a pillow could attract you attention.

THIEVES ARE WELL HUNGRY
West Virginia, USA
Do not under any circumstances whatever, attack a horse in an American town. Annoyed equine owners have the legal right to bring home thieves from the streets.

PLANTS HAVE FEELINGS TOO
Switzerland
Paying heed to activists’ demands, a government panel has notified citizens that feelings of plants are virtually unbreakable. Clear signs of asked bears on forest visits to avoid being prosecuted on insensitivity.

REFLECTIVE GYNAECOLOGY
Bahrain
In Bahrain, male doctors are forced to use mirrors. If you happen to be a male doctor treating these, you’ll only be allowed to examine the genitalia of female patients through a mirror.

NO DROPPING DEAD
United Kingdom
At one point in the 18th century, the region’s strictest legal code all unanimously agreed that people should not be prohibited from flying in the House of Parliament, and the law hasn’t been revoked to date.

A Glove Slave
Ng Kok Siew has always had a passion for animation and comics, something which gave him an advantage in her Pandora project. A student at animation art at LASALLE, Ng Kok Siew’s lighthearted manga is inspired by the quote “there is always a way out of a difficult situation, which allowed him to visualize a broad range of situations using an electric shaver - a product he relates to the most as he is always disposable razors. “The portable electric razor allows me to use it in worst situations then other appliances an electric plug.”

The final plot for his manga depicts a bear in the mountains overcoming a formidable bear with a shaver. “I can demonstrate the power of the shaver by showing a bear extremely quickly and start with a nice clean shave to a normal beard,” he quips. “The bear turning from a scary beast to a cute teddy bear at the end adds a hint of Japanese manga humour”.

Artistic License
Each issue, CAMPUS speaks to the up-and-coming creative artists behind our cover design and Pandora. For this issue, we spoke to Dijana of NFA for her illustrative cover and Ng Kok Siew for his entertaining manga. To find out how they channeled life experiences and inspirations into works of art.

What she does not know, though, is that, Alice must fight to escape a hostile world on the brink of oblivion.

OUT AND ABOUT

COLOURFUL SOUND
CREW MINI DISC

Have you been bored to bleat your tongue to avoid colourful expressions after shaving up for a pair of fancy headphones that sound trebly? Fortunately, Crew miniatures such visions with the trendy CK510iS Disc headphones. With 40mm driving units and a frequency range of 20 Hz – 20kHz, these headphones provide a rich bassy sound that plays your favourite songs like they’re made to be heard.

Hailing from South Korea, the Disc’s aesthetic appeal comes from its blast-from-the-past logo to a race-inspired design – you’ll find K-POP stars donning these simple yet colourful headphones. Colours available are black, pink, green and white, retailing at $359.90.

WI-FI MEMORIES
SAMSUNG EXIF

Samsung’s latest EXIF camera covers on to Wi-Fi connections in split seconds to let you share your amazing low-light shots on the online world. Packing a 12.4 megapixel BSI CMOS Sensor, a super bright and fast F1.4 lens (the fastest lens on any compact camera in the market), your Facebook and YouTube followers can catch all of your fabulous moments. You’ll also be able to capture ‘taken’ shots with a shallow depth of field, due to the F1.4 1.5 stop number.

The EXIF Smart Camera can even back up your photos via a selected cloud server, ensuring you never lose a picture perfect moment! The Samsung Camera EXIF is available from August 2012.

PREMIUM RUSH
(27 September)

Dodge! Speeding cars, crazed octobes and eight million cranky pedestrians all in a day’s work for Will (Joseph Gordon-Levitt), the best of New York’s agile and aggressive bicycle messengers. It takes a special breed to ride the fields – super lightweight, single-gear bikes with no brakes and riders who are equal part dirt bike jock and non-professor who risk becoming a safety on the pavement every time they head into traffic. But a guy who’s hit the limit is about to get more than even he is used to when his last envelope of the day is routine run away from a man this time, yet turns into a life or death chase through the streets of Manhattan.

RESIDENT EVIL: RETRIBUTION
(13 September)

Cast: Milla Jovovich, Michelle Rodriguez, Li Bing Bing

The Umbrella Corporation’s deadly T-virus continues to transform the global population into legions of the now eating undead. The number wax and wane, but only now, Alice (Jovovich), awake in the heart of Umbrella’s most clandestine facility and sole survivor of her mysterious outbreak, decides to escape her home for Washington, D.C. to prove that the creatures responsible for the outbreak are a mere taste. What she does not know, though, is that, Alice must fight to escape a hostile world on the brink of oblivion.
EVERY LAST MORSEL

Fancy something different this weekend from your usual chicken chop or pasta? Here are some kitschy new restaurants in the trendy Robertson Quay area. Maybe a little more upmarket than you’re used to, but probably worth every penny!

MHRMF

MHRMF is a popular spot on Facebook, and the food is as impressive as the presentation. The menu is designed around the philosophy of “Minimalist Japanese Cuisine” and offers a variety of dishes ranging from sushi to tempura. The prices are reasonable, and the service is friendly. It’s a great place to try some unique Japanese food in a trendy setting.

SALTEN

Salted in the neighborhood of Robertson Quay. The small in-house serves home-roasted coffees and a selection of teas. This charmingly rustic joint also serves a selection of light snacks and cakes.

DAMOTORY

DAMOTORY Korean Wine House is ideal for get-togethers, with their generous portions of classic Korean food like Kimchi Jjigae, Galbi, and bulgogi. They also have a wide variety of wines, both Korean and international, to pair with your meal. DAMOTORY is a great place to enjoy some Korean cuisine in a modern setting.

Stress Relief

When it comes to travelling, are you a Nature Junkie, Culture Vulture or a Shopaholic Princess? Answer these five simple questions, and you'll be on your way to finding out your true travelling self. If you're the type who loves to play online games and share your scores with your friends that don't care, then you might want to share the results of this questionnaire with your friends by cutting the card that fits you the most - you can flash it whenever you want to show off.

What Kind of Traveller Are You?

What Do You Pack First?

1. Enough sunscreen to start a shop.
2. Handy-dandy translation guidebook: All the words one needs to know to communicate with locals who speak a near-extinct language.
3. The bare essentials: face products, at least a presentable outfit and one emergency LBD!

What Kind of Destination Do You Imagine Yourself In?

1. Hiking through some dense undergrowth with a machete, hopefully getting into an Indestructible Zone situation.
2. Probably up in a place like Tibet, sitting down in some remote area, deep in mountainous regions.

What’s For Dinner?

1. Grubs: Any such thing at present?
2. Rustic food, perhaps some supposedly lost national dish endemic to this place only.
3. Pois gras, anyone?

If You Had an iPhone With You During Your Trip, What Would You Be Doing With It?

1. Making sure the Rambutan app is tracking my every step. I’m not to make unique journeys, not follow one.
2. Taking pictures, making notes, probably going to end up doing a photo journal of the trip. It’s not everyday you get to see a place like this.
3. Shopping online in between the walking time to the next store. Time is of the essence!

Finally, Which One of These Would Appeal to You the Most?

1. What’s better than trekking through the jungle and being in some areas unexplored as a career jungle man? Dependable barista duties.
2. Going to a place with weird laws just to experience it? Like how you can’t use more than 20 pesos in one transaction in Canada.
3. A vacation to spend for $500,000. I also swear that there’s a tax on how much it costs.

Nature Junkie!

You fill in this answer if you feel you simplify for the joy of learning about how others live, the quaint and more obscure, the better. Nothing resonates to you more than urban allure you find is the song of your people despite your everyday life being spent in suburbia.

You fill in this answer if you feel not simple for the joy of learning about how others live, the quaint and more obscure, the better. Nothing resonates to you more than urban allure you find is the song of your people despite your everyday life being spent in suburbia.
